

4402-66-31
K

A N
A D D R E S S
T O
P E R S O N S O F F A S H I O N, Relating to
B A L L S:

With a few occasional Hints concerning
PLAY-HOUSES, CARD-TABLES, &c.

In which is introduced
The Character of LUCINDA,
A Lady of the very best FASHION, and of most extraordinary PIETY.

A Land of Levity is a Land of Guilt: A serious Mind is the native Soil of every Virtue; and the single Character that does true Honour to Mankind. DR. YOUNG.

By the Author of PIETAS OXONIENSIS.

The SIXTH EDITION.
Revised, Corrected, and very much Enlarged.

SHREWSBURY:
Printed by J. EDDOWES;
And Sold by E. and C. DILLY, in the Poultry,
LONDON. MDCCLXXI.

P R E F A C E.

WHAT gave rise to the following attempt was my hearing a young Lady affirm, that she saw no harm in going to a BALL. After I had put together the heads of it, I shewed it to a few friends, who were of opinion it might be productive of some good if I would publish it; which I the more readily consented to do, when I observed how much the custom of giving Balls at private houses has of late prevailed.

vi P R E F A C E.

The original design of the piece being only to set the diversion of BALLS in its true light, I had no intention of saying any thing concerning Plays, Cards, &c. till I was advised to the publication of it, when I thought that some few observations on those amusements (especially on the former) might not be unnecessary; however, I chose rather to insert them by way of Notes, than to break the thread of what was already drawn up relating to BALLS; which will, I hope, be a sufficient apology for the length and frequency of the Notes dispersed up and down throughout the Book.

I shall not in the following treatise trouble you with any tedious account of the origine of BALLS, PLAYS, or any other

P R E F A C E. vii

other of those fashionable entertainments ; as well because I see no End that would thereby be answered, as because I confess myself ignorant of the exact time of their rise ; however, with regard to Cards, one of our London Chronicles informs us, that they were invented scarcely two centuries ago, for the recreation of a King of France, who was almost, if not altogether, an Ideot.

Neither is it my design to make any mention of religious Dances, such as was that of Miriam the Prophetess, and of the other Israelitish women, after the overthrow of Pharaoh and his host in the Red Sea, Exod. xv. 20. as also that of David before the Ark of the Covenant, 2 Sam. vi. 14. since it would be a most ridiculous absurdity

viii P R E F A C E.

furdity to go about to prove that these, and other Dances recorded in Scripture, are quite of a different nature and tendency from modern BALLS, and ASSEMBLIES.

In the Parable of the Prodigal Son we are told, that his return to his kind Father was celebrated with musick and dancing; but can any one be so absurd as to infer from hence that we have a Scripture-sanction for BALLS? no jurely; the whole of the story is a Parable: and as the very end of Parables is through the letter to convey some spiritual meaning to our senses, so dancing is here mentioned as it is a usual way of expressing joy; for we can no more suppose that there was a real Ball and entertainment given upon this occasion, than that the characters

P R E F A C E. ix

acters of the Prodigal and his Father were real: but as the whole Parable was spiritually intended, to express the return of a lost sinner to God as his reconciled father in Christ, so the musick, dancing, feasting, &c. are only introduced to carry on the figure, and to represent to us, by familiar illustrations, the joy which is in heaven over one sinner that repenteth.

My hearty wish is, that what is here offered to your perusal and serious reflection, may have the same happy effect upon many readers of it in print, as I have reason to hope it had in manuscript upon the Lady for whose benefit it was chiefly designed: upon which account, I earnestly intreat your patience to go through the whole; or at least I hope you will not toss it aside before

x P R E F A C E.

before you have well begun it, with declaring, that, ' you never saw such ' horrid stuff in all your days.'

Truth is a mighty weapon, though wielded by a weak hand; wherefore since I have this on my side, I do not despair of convincing all those who will weigh what they read with a fair unbiassed judgment. As to merit, I claim none, but that of a good intention, and would not willingly give offence, where I hope to render the greatest of all services: if therefore any take exception at what they meet with in the course of this little pamphlet, let me beg them to search into their own hearts, and examine carefully whether an unwillingness to part with those idols, the keeping of which they can no otherwise defend than by re-

P R E F A C E. xi

refusing to hearken to the voice of Scripture, Reason, and Conscience, may not in some measure be the cause of their being displeased at what they read.

And now, heartily recommending what follows to the blessing of God, and humbly submitting it to your candor, I beg leave to subscribe myself

Your most obedient,

and most humble Servant,

The AUTHOR.

AN

A N
A D D R E S S

T O
PERSONS OF FASHION, &c.

INTRODUCTION.

ALTHOUGH it is the
A undoubted duty of every Christian to do all in his power to promote the Salvation of others, yet he should be careful to guide his words with discretion, and not

B

xiv INTRODUCTION.

not to urge any thing upon those with whom he hopes to succeed, without defending his cause with weighty and forcible arguments; lest he should make them imagine, because he advances little or nothing on his own side of the question, that consequently there is little or nothing to be said in support of it.

It is upon this plan that I purpose, with God's assistance, to pursue my design of proving the absolute unlawfulness of the now so fashionable diversion of BALLS; and though I am sensible that the mighty torrent of custom is against me, and that I may be branded with the appellation of a precise fanatic; yet I hope to demonstrate with the clearest evidence, that BALLS are entirely inconsistent consistent with the Spirit of Christianity, and that it is not possible to be present at them without incurring great guilt. All I desire of those who read the following pages is, (what I have already requested in the preface) that they will for a little while divest themselves of all prejudice, and not blindly resolve to condemn, before they read. The arguments I shall bring are all founded upon Scripture and plain Reason; therefore, till they can be answered from Scripture and plain Reason, it is neither Laughter, Sneers, nor Ridicule, that can invalidate their force.

INTRODUCTION. xv

Observe here, that I address myself chiefly to those who have some good desires, and yet indulge them-xvi INTRODUCTION.

felves in the practice of going to BALLS, because they are not convinced of their evil tendency ; for to prove their sinfulness to such as are determined to go to them at all events, would indeed be labour in vain.

SECTION

SECTION I.

ALL the arguments I ever remember to have heard brought in vindication of BALLS, are,

First, That they are no where forbidden in Scripture, and consequently are innocent.

Secondly, That many good Christians go to them.

Thirdly, That provided a person does not make a constant practice of going to them, there can be no harm in them now and then by way of relaxation; and, that by mixing ourselves sometimes with the diversions of the World, we return with greater relish to retirement and religious Duties.

18 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

Whether BALLS are particularly forbidden in any place of Scripture, I will not take upon me to determine: let it suffice for my present purpose that they are forbidden by the whole voice of Revelation, inasmuch as every thing is strictly forbidden that may disorder our Souls; and be destructive of that meek, humble, contrite Spirit, which constitutes the real Christian; and that BALLS do tend entirely to prevent the attainment of such a temper, and cannot but be very pernicious to our

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 19

our Souls, will be fully proved hereafter. There are many things not particularly forbidden in Scripture, which yet every one must allow to be very great and heinous Sins; and were we to do what we please, from the notion that what we do is no where particularly forbidden in Scripture, what great extravagancies would such a fancy lead us into? We are no where throughout the whole Bible commanded not to set an house on fire, yet no-body can be so weak as to imagine it is no sin wilfully to commit such an action; and that, because the whole tenor of Scripture forbids us to injure our neighbour. Besides, had our Saviour and his Apostles given a particular prohibition against all the fooleries that the depravity of fallen man

20 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

man hath invented, might we not say with Saint John, that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written (a) ?

But have we any reason to think, that at the time when Christianity was first preached, there were any such pleasures among Christians as are to be met with in a modern Ball-room ? No, the honour of these improvements is all due to us, who have been so long blessed with the transcendent light of the Gospel ; scarcely did the Pagan world, in the midst of their idolatrous darkness, ever arrive at that exquisite perfection in all kinds of Diversions, Luxury, and Extravagance, that is now to be met

(a) John xxi. 25.

met with amongst those who are reckoned good Christians.

But granting, that at the time of the planting of Christianity, there really were some such entertainments amongst Heathens as modern BALLS; yet we cannot suppose that Christ and his Apostles should think it necessary to tell their Converts, that they could not romp and skip about like buffoons, and merry-andrews, in all the glare of expensive dress, amongst a croud of unconverted Heathens, either for their own diversion, or for that of the company, and at the same time sanctify the Lord God in their Hearts (b), preserve a truly Christian Spirit, and

(b) 1 Pet. iii. 15.

22 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

and be striving to enter in at the strait Gate (c). Can any man in his senses make such a supposition?

But here, (according to the second argument) it will be said, that the world, at least the part of it which we inhabit, is now become Christian, and that the company we meet at these nocturnal revellings, called BALLS, are not Heathens, but Christians.

I grant that they are so called, and that they have the external appearance of Christianity; but are they Disciples of that blessed Jesus, who is meek and lowly in heart (d)?

Are

(c) Luke xiii. 24. (d) Mat. xi. 29.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 23

Are they crucified to the world, and the world to them (e)? Do they hunger and thirst after Righteousness? Are they of the number of those pure in heart, those poor in spirit, or of those meek and blessed mourners (f), to whom our Lord has promised the kingdom of heaven? Are they pressing toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, (g)? Are they redeeming the time, because the days are evil (h)? Are they not often engaged in that foolish talking and jesting, which the Apostle tells us are not convenient (i)? Does the word of Christ dwell in them richly, teaching and admonishing

(e) Gal. vi. 14. (f) Mat. v. 3, — 6.

(g) Phil. iii. 14. (h) Eph. v. 16.

(i) Eph. v. 4.

24 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

ing one another (k), warning the unruly, comforting the feeble-minded, and supporting the weak (l)? Are they giving diligence to make their calling and election sure (m), lest a promise being made them of entering into his rest, any of them should seem to come short of it (n)? Is the love of God shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto them (o)? Have they received the Spirit of Adoption whereby they cry abba Father? and do they through that Spirit mortify the deeds of the body (p)? Are their affections set on things above, and not on things on the earth (q)? Are they not conformed to this present evil world (r)?
instead

(k) Coloss. iii. 16.

(l) 1 Thess. v. 14.

(m) 2 Pet. i. 10.

(n) Heb. iv. 1.

(o) Rom. v. 5.

(p) Rom. viii. 13, 15.

(q) Coloss. iii. 2.

(r) Rom. xii. 2.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 25

instead of taking thought wherewithal they shall be clothed (s), are they seeking to adorn themselves in the hidden man of the heart (t)? Are they renewed in the spirit of their minds (u)? Does Christ dwell in their hearts by faith (w)? Do they take up their cross daily, and deny themselves, and follow him (x)? Are they living as strangers and pilgrims upon earth (y)? Do they continue instant in prayer (z)? Have they that meek and quiet spirit, which St. Peter assures us is of such great price in the sight of God (a)? Are they blameless and harmless, the Sons of God, amidst a crooked and perverse nation, among C whom

(s) Mat. vi. 31.

(t) 1 Pet. iii. 4.

(u) Eph. iv. 23.

(w) Eph. iii. 17.

(x) Mat. xvi. 24.

(y) Heb. xi. 13.

(z) Rom. xii. 12.

(a) 1 Pet. iii. 4.

26 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

whom they shine as lights in the world (b)? In a word, are they new creatures in Christ Jesus (c)?

These, and such as these, are Scripture-marks of a Christian; and Scripture is the only touchstone whereby we can, according to the Apostle's command, try the Spirits whether they are of God (d): and though we are not to pass hasty censures upon any, yet we must not so far dishonour the Gospel of our blessed Saviour, as to admit every vain pretender to Christianity into the class of true believers; for as sure as God's word is true, any person who has not the before-mentioned

(b) Philip. ii. 15.

(c) 2 Cor. v. 17.

(d) 1 John iv. 1.

tioned marks of a Christian, can lay no just claim to the name: Therefore before we waste our precious time at BALLS, PLAYS, CARD-TABLES *, &c. upon the presumption

C 2

tion

* Permit me here just to put a question or two to every Lady who frequents Card-tables. First, how can you consistently with your christian profession in the least degree countenance a practice, which evidently is and has been attended with such fatal consequences as gaming is known to produce? Secondly, Can any woman who spends great part of an evening in playing at Cards, and no inconsiderable part of the morning in receiving, sending, reading and writing Cards for engagements, reasonably conclude that she is clothing herself with the whole armour of God, and working out her own salvation with fear and trembling? Eph. vi. 13. Phil. ii. 12. But you will perhaps tell me, you are by no means a constant player at Cards, and when you do, it is only for a trifle, just to kill the time, or pass

28 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

tion that many good Christians make no scruple of going to them, how much does it behove us to examine whether the above Scripture-marks of a Christian do appear (and where they are, they must appear) in those persons pass away an idle hour, and that by playing at Cards you often avoid doing much worse! Though I will not pretend to deny the truth of this assertion, yet I hope it will be sufficient answer to say, that I am sorry you think the short time allotted you in this state of probation to prepare your Soul for Eternity, to be so very cheap a drug that you will sell it for a trifle, when you are so solemnly called upon to redeem it; and that it will be as vain an excuse to that idle unprofitable servant who hid his lord's talent in the earth, Mat. xxv. 25. to say, he might have been doing worse; as it would be for a criminal who was accused of theft, to plead in his own behalf that he might have been committing murder.

persons by whose examples we suffer ourselves to be led? For if these be the Bible-evidences of a Christian, and if they are not found in those whose Religion is set up for the warrant of BALLS, then their presence at them cannot justify or authorise them; and we are reduced to the necessity either of disbelieving the Bible, or else of believing that those who have not these evidences are no otherwise Christians than by name and outward profession.

St. Paul assures us, that he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh; but he is a Jew who is one inwardly, and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the

30 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

the letter (e) : So he is certainly no Christian who is only one outwardly ; neither is that baptism which consists in the meer outward washing of water ; but he is a Christian who is one inwardly, and baptism is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter only.

Now, as it is impossible for any body to object against this conclusion, entertain not for the future such unworthy notions of a real Christian, who has in him the mind that was in Christ (f), as to suppose that such an one will go to BALLS, PLAY-HOUSES, or any of those Seminaries of Vice, which Satan and his instruments have established in this

(e) Rom. ii. 28.

(f) Philip. ii. 5.

this land ; and which they would honour with the specious but false name of innocent diversions *.

I have

* It is indeed astonishing, how any person, who makes the least pretensions to Christianity, can possibly be seen at a Play-house, since our Comedies in general are not only stuffed with oaths and impieties, but with such obscenities as a modest Heathen would have blushed at ; yet even these are perhaps not productive of such evil consequences as many of our Tragedies, to which grave matrons carry their wards with the notion of their learning instructive lessons of VIRTUE and MORALITY. Now if ranting, romantic love, pride, vain-glory, revenge, lust, and cruelty, (not to mention self-murder) be esteemed Virtue and Morality, I must confess that most of our celebrated Tragedies abound with these ; and that there is no place in the world better calculated to make young people truly

32 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

I have now, I hope, fully confuted the two first arguments in favour of truly virtuous and moral, than the two Theatres of Covent Garden and Drury-Lane.

But you object, that the design of Plays is not to encourage, but to lash the follies of Mankind, by giving us a proper abhorrence of those vices which are exposed upon the Stage.

What validity there is in your objection, may be discovered by desiring you to consider in what light you would look upon a Lady, who being anxious to have her aversion to oaths, blasphemy, and obscenity increased, should make all her servants come into her presence, and give them a crown to curse, swear, act and talk indecently, till she found her antipathy for these crimes raised to a proper pitch : or fearing lest her son and daughter were not enough disgusted at the sins

of BALLS, and proved beyond all dispute, that they are forbidden by the sins of unchastity or drunkenness, was to admonish the one to frequent houses of ill fame, and the other to spend a few hours with a company of drunkards at a tavern.

Since I have touched on this subject, I beg leave to relate the following fact, which however shocking it may appear to a Christian, I myself was eye-witness of some years ago, when with shame and sorrow I confess I was a great frequenter of Play houses. ' It ' was at the benefit of a certain Dancing- ' master: The boxes were mostly filled with ' young children who I suppose were the ' scholars of this master, and came to have ' their infant ideas formed by a lewd Come- ' dy. Between the acts, or after the play, I ' forget which, one of these children who ' seemed to be about seven years old, came ' forth, and danced two publick minuets ' upon the stage with her master; without doubt the whole tenor of Scripture, and that none but those who content themselves with the Shadow of Christianity instead of the substance, will ever be frequenters of them.

34 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

The third argument in favour of BALLS, yet remains to be answered; namely, that ‘ provided we do ‘ not make a constant practice of ‘ going to them, there can be no ‘ harm in them now and then, by ‘ way of relaxation; and that by ‘ mixing ourselves sometimes with
‘ the

‘ doubt to the no small satisfaction of her ‘ good Mama, whose heart must needs also ‘ dance with joy, to see her dear child so ‘ much applauded by so polite an assembly;
‘ and that she had already acquired le corps
‘ degagé, and was totally freed from all ‘ mauvaise honte at so tender an age.’

‘ the diversions of the world, we ‘ return with greater relish to retire‘ ment and religious duties.’

To this I readily and briefly reply, that the same reasons, why we ought not always to be present at them, hold good why we should never be present at them; unless you will roundly maintain that we CAN serve God and Mammon (g); that when we are called to give our hearts to God (h), a part of them is only meant; and that we may sometimes indulge a trifling worldly spirit, and sometimes be devout and heavenly-minded; which is not at all less absurd than if you were to say, we may be sometimes drunk
and

(g) Mat. vi. 24.

(h) Prov. xxiii. 26.

36 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

and sometimes sober ; sometimes honest and sometimes dishonest.

Let me farther add, that it is a miserable sign of our being yet dead in sin, that we can look upon such things in the light of relaxations ; and to be able to take delight in them now and then, argues our nature to be as much unrenewed, as if we were pleased with them every night of our lives. And those who assert, that by mixing ourselves sometimes with the diversions of the world, we return with greater relish to retirement and religious duties ; might with as great propriety affirm that BALLS and PLAYS were means of grace, and highly proper to kindle a spirit of devotion ; that a sure way to become truly religious, is to lay
our

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 37

our good thoughts aside, to mix ourselves with vain, worldly company, and do as they do ; in short, to stifle all the motions of God's Spirit, and drive him from us.

Would you not think any man a proper object for Bedlam, that should seriously give you such advice as this, in order to make you a more zealous Christian? yet however monstrous and absurd this may seem, it is not at all more so, than the before mentioned argument for sometimes indulging ourselves in the diversions of the age, in order that we may return to the practice of Religion with greater earnestness and satisfaction.

D

But

But farther, what a deplorable state must that soul be in, that is obliged to have recourse to such miserable shifts? How unfit to launch into eternity, where we are to be happy day and night in sweet communion with God, and in singing praises to the Lamb for ever and ever; (and that without any BALLS, CARDS, &c. to relax our minds and encrease our zeal) how unfit, I say, must that soul be for such a work as this, that had rather spend five or six hours at a BALL, than in religious Meditation, Prayer, holy Discourse, reading the word of God, or any other good book? Surely the joys of heaven must be very insipid to such an one, and the employment

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 39

ployment of faints and angels nothing but mere drudgery *.

But it is not so with the true Christian. He looks upon his Master's yoke as light and easy (i); and his commandments are more desirable to him than fine gold; yea, sweeter than honey and the honey-

D 2

comb

* Let us learn wisdom from the tender infant; how does he brook the absence of a kind parent? Can all the tales that old wives have invented, sooth the anxiety he suffers by such a separation? How then is it possible that a dear child of God can chuse to be lulled for hours together into a total forgetfulness of the happy relation he bears to the Lord Jehovah, by such poor, low, irrational inventions, that many good old wives would have been ashamed to have been the authors of?

(i) Mat. xi. 30.

comb (k). The heart of the true Christian is changed, and fixed upon heavenly objects; therefore, he is constant and steady in his obedience. His religion does not influence him only by fits and starts; nor can he lay it aside in order to attend the pleasures of the world, and take it up again when he has no other engagements upon his hands.

If this then be the character of the true Christian, what shall I say to those who have scarcely the shadow of it? Can you possibly think that you have obtained the new heart and the new spirit (l), which God hath promised to his faithful

(k) Psalm xix. 10. (l) Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 41

faithful people ; and that the same mind is in you that was also in Christ Jesus (m), when you are pleased with those very things, with which the most profligate part of the world is pleased ? Certainly there can be no greater proof that the same dispositions and tempers are in you that are in them, and that you are of those very people whom St. Paul styles lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God (n).

(m) Phil. ii. 5. (n) 2 Tim. iii. 4.

S E C T I O N I I.

THUS much for my answer to the third argument in favour of BALLS. And now, I cannot but think that every unprejudiced person will allow, that what I have already advanced is sufficient to overthrow whatever has been, or can be said in vindication of them. However,

First, It is not my intention to stop here, but to proceed to shew yet farther, that the diversion of BALLS is totally destructive of every religious Tentiment, insomuch that it strikes at the very root of Christianity.

Secondly,

Secondly, I shall lay before you the reasons why the evil tendency, and actual wickedness of this kind of amusement, is nevertheless so little perceived, that many souls are hurried away by it, without being sensible of their error.

Lastly, I shall add a word of exhortation and caution, concerning the great danger of a blind conformity to custom and example.

And First, That the custom of BALLS is destructive of every religious sentiment, can any one deny who takes an impartial view of the frequenters of them, commonly called the BEST company? By far the greater part of whom, if they live

44 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

live not in any outward notorious wickedness, yet seem perfectly indifferent and lukewarm in what concerns their souls: Their Religion is a thing by the bye, a formal lifeless piece of ceremony, which only serves to their greater delusion.

Now, if this be the case, (and would to God it were not) may we not safely affirm, that there are more people kept from God by BALLS, and such like trifling amusements, than by more palpable and gross sins? For the latter are more apt to gall the sinner's conscience, and send him to Christ for ease; whereas the former, whilst they resist the Grace of God, and quench the strivings of his Spirit, rather

rather keep conscience asleep, and by that means gnaw like a canker-worm, and as it were undermine the soul without our being sensible of receiving any injury from them.

God forbid that I should here be understood as if I thought it necessary for all persons to be guilty of notorious sins, in order to make them sensible of their want of a Saviour's merits; for this is so far from being my meaning, that I would willingly convince you of the great danger of looking upon any sin as little, and shew you how highly displeasing every thing must needs be in the sight of an all-pure God that has even the least tendency to evil.

But

But whether all persons choose to look upon the diversions of BALLS as wicked or not; yet we have the authority of an Apostle to say, that she that liveth in pleasure, is dead while she liveth (o). She may indeed be in perfect health and spirits; and be greatly admired for her gaiety and vivacity, whilst her poor soul is languishing and dying within her; so that whilst she is alive to the pleasures of the world, she is really dead to the things of God.

Stella and Jucundus say, they seldom dance but at the assizes, and it is very hard people may not divert themselves a little upon these publick

(o) 1 Tim. v. 6.

publick occasions: But let me tell Stella and Jucundus (if they will promise not to affright me with the horrid names of Methodist and Enthusiast) how they may spend the time of the assizes, much more conformably to the word of God, and much more profitably to themselves and others.

When Stella and Jucundus hear the sound of the Trumpet proclaim the entrance of the Judge, let them consider how they are prepared to hear the sound of the last Trumpet, when the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and when this mortal shall put on immortality (p). When they hear the prisoners summoned into court, let them reflect,
that

(p) 1 Cor. xv. 52, — 54.

48 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

that the time approaches when we must all stand before the awful tribunal of Christ, where witnesses cannot be suborned, where all the thoughts of our hearts will be exposed, and where Judgment will be laid to the Line, and Righteousness to the Plummets (q).

Do they hear that any of the unhappy Malefactors are condemned to death? Let them think, that this sentence, horrible as it is, is but from the mouth of an earthly judge, and the death to which they are consigned is only temporal; and let this consideration excite them, instead of consuming whole nights in rioting and revelling at the assemblies, (q) Isa. xxviii. 17.

semblies, to spend them in visiting and exhorting these unhappy objects, in fasting, weeping and praying for them, if peradventure their sins may be forgiven them, and they may escape that far more tremendous sentence of their heavenly judge, which shall be pronounced against all that know not God and obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ (r).

Now I would ask Stella and Jucundus whether an assize spent in this manner is not every way consistent with the character of Christians? and how any persons who pretend to a delicacy of sentiment, much less to religion, can so far
E. forget

(r) Mat. xxv. 41. 1 Theff. i. 8.

50 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

forget the feelings of their fellow-creatures as to make the time of their wretchedness a season of mirth, vanity and pleasure.

Another weighty argument against BALLS is, that they prevent people from looking into themselves, and cherish a vain, trifling, unchristian spirit ; not only for the time being, but oftentimes for whole days and weeks before and after ; as any unprejudiced person must allow, that has heard what wonderful satisfaction young Ladies frequently express at the thoughts of an approaching Assembly, and what studied preparations they make for their dress upon the Ball-night : And when this is over, what ample fields for scandal are opened from the behaviour and particularities of the company? What edifying conversation does the fashionable or unfashionable flounce of such a lady's negligee, or the preposterous size of her hoop afford? And how often is the rustic awkwardness or unparalleled elegance of an entertainment discussed?
the

Perhaps some will say, ' It is true, these things must in general be allowed to be contrary to the Spirit of Christianity, and many may be greatly hurt by them, but I never think of a BALL before I go to it; at least when I do, it is with mere indifference; I give myself no trouble about my dress, nor do I ever make any satirical remarks upon the company; therefore how-

52 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

*' ever some people may abuse these ' innocent amusements, I never was
' the worse for them in all my life.'*

To this I answer ; that it is a wretched mark of an unrenewed heart, to fancy that you can go to such places without being hurt by them ; as nothing can more tend to deaden Grace and to extinguish the Life of God in the Soul, than the vain conversation, and trifling behaviour of the company one generally meets with at BALLS. But if you are determined not to allow that you yourself are the worse for these things, (though you confess that many people may be greatly hurt by them ;) yet, are you not aware of the harm you do by your example, and that you are, though you

you may not think of it, soothing others in their sins, and contributing your part to keep them in a state of impenitency? Surely this will be no inconsiderable augmentation of your own guilt. ‘No, you say, because if I did not go to these places, others would. It is not in my power to put a stop to such proceedings.’ But do not you by going do all in one person’s power to countenance and encourage them? And, on the contrary, by absenting yourself, do not you do all in one person’s power to discourage and prevent them? If every body was to argue as you do, the most wicked and abominable customs would be openly supported and defended, whilst every supporter of them would be crying out, ‘It is not I that am the

54 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

‘ cause of these doings, because they ‘ would be the same whether I con‘ tributed to them or not.’ Now let me ask these persons, Would you go upon the high-way whilst you have a real desire to prevent robbing? Or would you get drunk and swear, because when you allow such habits to be very wicked, you have a like desire to put a stop to them? This is just as if you were to say, ‘ Though I heartily wish ‘ there were no such sins as robbery,
‘ drunkenness and swearing, yet I ‘ am determined to put them into ‘ practice, although I know I am ‘ hereby doing all in my power to ‘ encourage these abominable vices.’ Examine the case, and you will find it just the same with regard to BALLS.

You

You will perhaps ask, if I make no difference between robbery, drunkenness, swearing, and going to a BALL? I answer, certainly there is a great difference; yet still the reason is the very same why we should abstain from all; (viz.) because all are contrary to the spirit of christianity; and whosoever can indulge himself in any darling pleasure because it is not so great a sin as robbery, drunkenness, and swearing, is so far from evidencing a sincerity of heart, that he treats God in a manner he himself would ill resent to be used by any of his earthly friends.

But you say your temper of heart is never hurt by going to a BALL.

Granting

56 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

Granting this possible, how will you convince others of the truth of it? Will not the gayest bubble of vanity in the assembly, readily imagine, that the very same sensations pass in your breast as do in hers; and if she was to be told that her attendance at BALLS occasioned her to commit sin, would she not be glad to make use of the sanction of your name in her own vindication, and perhaps urge that she was sure if there were any harm in these diversions, you would not be present at them? I mention this, just to shew how much worse effects are likely to ensue, when a person of a religious character goes to places of this sort, than others who are of quite a different stamp, and that even supposing they were lawful,

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 57

lawful, we ought by no means to stretch to the utmost bounds of our liberty, lest we should thereby cause our brethren to offend.

Let me farther ask you, who pretend to some zeal for Religion, and yet make no scruple of going to BALLS, PLAYS, &c. whether you really look upon yourself as a steward of what you possess, who without hesitation can squander away in diversions what would contribute to the support of so many of our poor distressed fellow-creatures *? How much oftener you have

* How many poor families who through losses in trade, want of employment, long sickness, &c. are reduced to the greatest necessity, might be annually relieved with the sums

58 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

have deprived yourselves of your natural rest to attend a BALL than

to

sums that are squandered away at the Theatres for the support of a company of idle drones, whose whole business is to corrupt the public ?

Perhaps some may think that because what they spend every year at Play houses is very inconsiderable, therefore the guilt of withholding their alms from poor distressed house-keepers, and others that really stand in need of them, and contributing to the maintenance of such a set of infamous lazy wretches as players in general are, can by no means be chargeable to them. All I desire of such is, seriously to consider, that places for the promoting of sin and wickedness, are in effect as much supported by subscription as those that are dedicated to the glory of God, and intended for the relief of the sick, needy, and deserted ; and

as

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 59

to watch unto prayer (s)? How much more time you allot to adorn

(s) 1 Pet. iv. 7.

as every one who, like the poor widow in the Gospel, adds his mite towards the carrying on any pious design, shall in no wise lose his reward, Mark ix. 14. and the prayers of those he has assisted shall be heard in his behalf; (that is, provided what he gives springs from the true principle of faith in Christ, and not from that of vain glory, or self-justification,) so in like manner, whoever contributes the least mite towards the encouragement of Vice and Idleness, shall, (unless timely repentance prevent it) in no wise go unpunished; and has great reason to fear lest he should be answerable for the sins of those poor wretches to whose support he has been necessary, without which they might have sought out an innocent and useful way of life.

But

60 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

adorn your body, when you are to shine in a stage box, or to sparkle in a minuet amidst the circle of wondering beholders in a Ball-room, than you do each day to adorn your soul for the general assembly and Church of the first-born (t) ?

May

(t) Heb. xii. 23.

But I will suppose you one of those who are not neglectful of the duty of alms-giving, and therefore (to use your own expression) you think there is no harm at all in now and then taking the rational amusement of a good play: so that at the year's end, between what is flung away at Play-houses and other diversions, and what you falsely call Charity, supposing you a person of an easy fortune, your accounts may nearly stand as follows.

To

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 61

May I also demand in what state of mind for religious duties you

F return

To Mrs. Cornely's and } Almack's, — —	5	5	0
One Masquerade and Dress,	3	3	0
For the support of Ranelagh } and Vauxhall , and the Musi- } cians, Singers, Waiters, &c. } thereunto belonging, —	5	5	0
One Ridotto and two Operas,	2	2	0
Lost at Cards (Card-money } included) — —	6	6	0
Paid at ten Plays for the } encouragement of Vice and } Immorality, and for the main- } tenance of Actors, Dancers, } Buffoons, Mimicks, and other } Stage-gentry, — —	2	10	0
Total year's account,	24	11	0
For the relief of the Sick } and Needy, — —	10	10	0
I fear

62 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

return home from BALLS; whether or no your mind is never full

I fear there are but few who frequent public places, that will have any reason to complain that I have done them injustice, either by enhancing the sum they annually consume in diversions, or that I have been too low in my estimate of what they employ for the benefit of the distressed: I would therefore now beg them to reflect how they would like to have the above bill produced at the great Day of Accounts, when they shall be called upon to answer for the talents committed to their charge; and when every one shall be rewarded according to his works. Mat. xvi. 27. xxv. 25. Would they not have reason to fear lest it should strike them speechless before the judge, and lest that dreadful sentence should be pronounced against them, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels? Mat. xxv. 41. Whilst those who not daring to countenance, either by

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 63

full of the pretty things that were whispered in your ear by your partner; whether you are never chagrined about some punctilio of precedence, or elated on account of the extraordinary notice that was taken of you; especially if it was your happy lot to open the BALL, or to lead ^{up} the first country-dance with the most honourable personage in the room? O what

F 2

noble

by their presence or purse, whatever hath the appearance of evil, but from the true motive of faith working by love, have been laying up to themselves treasures in heaven, and have dedicated their abundance to feeding the hungry, cloathing the naked, and visiting the sick and imprisoned, shall have their ears charmed with those glorious words, 'Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Mat. xxv. 34.'

64 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

noble matter of heart-felt joy must this needs afford to a truly pious soul, who has experienced the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost (u) !

I would further desire to know, whether before you exclude the sun in order to go to sleep, you use your Morning or Evening Prayers ? Or whether, as it is uncertain which are most proper, you esteem it most prudent to use neither ?

Lastly, let me ask you, with a serious concern for your eternal welfare, what you can possibly think of the state of your souls, who, whilst so many Christians are praising

• (u) Tit. iii. 5.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 65

praising the Lord for having refreshed them with seasonable rest, and for having safely brought them to the beginning of a new day; whilst so many Christians are thus happily employed, what can you, I say, think of the state of your souls, who, wearied with your last night's revel, are sinking into your beds with the din of the concluding country-dance in your ears, and having spent the night in the works of darkness, (in order to compleat the whole) must waste the day in sleeping?

Was I to intreat you to spend only a few hours, without intermission, in Prayer and Meditation, you would think me an hard task-master, and would readily ask, What? Are we to be always on our knees? Is there no time for relaxation? Yet, while you are engaged in the pleasures of the brilliant assembly, when your usual time for Evening Prayer is come, I fear you never once say, What? Are we to be at this work all night? Is there no time for Prayer and Meditation?

66 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

Believe me, your case is very deplorable, and so much the more so, as you do not see your danger. O how happy is Satan when he can make people wear his chain and think themselves at liberty!

Hear now the language of the true Christian's heart. 'O how unhappy should I be, were I by the senseless hurry of a BALL, the obscenity

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 67

scenity of the Stage, or the folly and impertinence of a Card-Table, to be deprived of those sweet seasons I so frequently enjoy, when I have the blessed privilege of sitting with humble Mary at the Master's feet, or of leaning with the beloved disciple on my Saviour's breast! O how vain and intolerable do all sublunary pleasures seem to me, when my soul is thus happy in communion with my redeeming Lord, and when I can say in the words of the Spouse, 'I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine (w).'

Hear now the language of the false Christian's heart, whether he be openly wicked, or decently lukewarm

(w) Cant. vi. 3.

68 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

warm. ' O how unhappy should I be, were I to be deprived of the joys of the BALL, the wit and repartee of the Stage, or the pleasing anxiety of the Card-Table, by a dull inanimated round of dry Devotions, whilst a plentiful fortune affords me such frequent opportunities of relaxing myself in the pleasures of gay company, and the diversions of the beau monde.'

Here then consists the great difference between the one and the other of these characters. The real Christian seeks relaxation in his God, from the noise and hurry of the world. The false Christian seeks relaxation in the noise and hurry of the world from the horrid drudgery of Religion.

To

To proceed: Do you consider what heinous mockery you are guilty of before God, every time you say your prayers, till you give up all thoughts of ever going to another BALL? For instance only, in the Lord's Prayer. How can you beg that the Name of God may be hallowed by you (x), when you are calmly resolved to neglect the common duty of waiting upon God in Evening Prayer (perhaps also in Family Prayer) in order to go to a diversion which directly tends to the dishonour of Christ, and to the subversion of every holy temper? How can you pray that God's kingdom may come, and his will be done in earth, as it is in heaven (y); whilst
you

(x) (y) Lord's Prayer.

you continue to practise such things as would not only thwart his will, but have a tendency to establish the kingdom of Lucifer, and to overthrow the kingdom of God? Lastly, how can you, without the highest degree of hypocrisy, beseech the Almighty not to lead you into temptation, and to deliver you from evil (z); when you are absolutely determined to run yourself headlong into temptation? And so far to choose the evil, and refuse the good, as to pass over your stated times and exercises of devotion on purpose to obtain the former and reject the latter?

Can any body say that there is the least aggravation in calling this a solemn

(z) Lord's Prayer.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 71

a solemn mockery of Almighty God? May the Lord give you Grace to lay these considerations seriously to heart! but if you are determined not to leave off going to BALLS, I dare not affirm, but that you had better leave off saying your Prayers; for though you honour God with your mouth, your heart is far from him (a); and the prayer of the wicked is an abomination to him (b).

I cannot conclude this section without earnestly desiring all MOTHERS and AUNTS well to consider these Things, and instead of leading their Daughters and Nieces about to BALLS, PLAYS, CARD-TABLES, &c. to bring them up in the nurture and

(a) Mat. xv. 8.

(b) Prov. xxviii. 9.

72 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

and admonition of the Lord (c), and see that their relaxations are such as Christians may innocently take; but, in general, so little do they reflect on the guilt they hereby pull down on their own heads, that many dear children of God have been forcibly compelled to go to these nurseries of sin and vice by their worldly relations; I mean, not only by such as are notoriously wicked, but even by the more decent formalists, who can pity careless sinners, and rail at the degeneracy of the age, whilst their greatest uneasiness is to see the true marks of real piety in any of their family.

S E C T.

(c) Eph. vi. 4.

S E C T I O N III.

WHAT can be more full and persuasive than those words of St. Paul, Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ (d)? And again, Those things which ye have both learned, and received and heard and seen in me, do (e). Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God (f), &c. I know it is easy to put smooth glossy interpretations upon these and other texts of Scripture, and so, to accommodate the whole Bible to the manner in which we choose to live, instead of con-G forming

(d) 1 Cor. xi. 1.

(e) Phil. iv. 9.

(f) 1 Cor. x. 35.

74 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

forming ourselves to the Bible, which many are bold enough to do, and so wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction (g) * ; but I think

(g) 2 Pet. iii. 16.

* It is amazing how some people (especially such as have a name to live and are dead) will twist and torture the Scriptures, in order to bring the meaning of texts to the ideas already formed in their minds, and to lull themselves into a wretched security, whilst by dividing their hearts between God and the world, they are buried in lukewarmness and blinded by formality. Thus almost every expression in the whole book of God, that enjoins an holiness of life beyond what suits their taste and convenience, they either tell you is confined to primitive times, or is not to be taken in a literal sense. And when neither of these salvos will serve their turn, rather than suffer their eyes to be opened to see the naked state of their souls, they will quarrel think it would be rather more prudent, if they would first make it appear that when the Holy Ghost says one thing he means another; otherwise, till it can be proved that this holy Apostle went to BALLS, and that they tend to promote the glory of God; how can it possibly be thought lawful for us to go to them, who are so solemnly called upon to imitate him, and to make the glory of God the end of all our actions.

G 2

Now

quarrel with the translation. So that setting aside what is confined to primitive times, what is not to be taken in a literal sense, and what is not translated according to the fancy of men of corrupt minds; Christians, now-a-days, would be deprived of no inconsiderable part of God's word.

Now only figure to yourself the chosen vessel St. Paul, with the Virgin Mary for his partner *, dressed out in fashionable taste, dancing together in a modern assembly? Would not such a sight immediately destroy

* I think I ought to make an apology to the Christian reader for introducing this supposition, as the very mention of it does not only carry with it an absurdity, but savours of something shocking; upon which account it was wholly omitted in every edition of this book, except in the first, which was published about ten years ago: yet there is no reason why the thought of seeing an Apostle jumping about in a Ball-room, should be shocking to a Christian, but what should make it as shocking for any Christian whatever to see himself there, unless he is determined to set at nought the above command of St. Paul, namely, Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 77

destroy the high ideas you entertain of their piety? Your own heart must tell you that it would. Again, were you to meet with any history wherein either of these eminent saints were set forth as frequenters of BALLS, and lovers of Dancing; would you give any credit to that history? Certainly you would not; and for this excellent reason, because you always justly looked upon the great Apostle of the Gentiles, and upon the Mother of our blessed Saviour, as extraordinary examples of piety; and because your notions of a Saint and a Dancer, are as contrary as light and darkness. I appeal to your own conscience if this be not true? Now to apply this.—If to see St. Paul and the blessed Virgin crossing over or figuring together in a country dance, would entirely destroy the exalted opinion you have of them ; and if you would not give credit to any history that should represent them to have been fond of dancing, as being utterly inconsistent with your thoughts of their great sanctity ; how can you flatter yourself that your Religion will be of any service to you, whilst you give into such practices as are totally destructive of all your own sentiments of piety ?

78 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

It may be objected, that you are not the Mother of our Lord, nor called upon to be an Apostle. I answer, that though you are neither the one nor the other ; yet you are as much called upon to be a servant
and

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 79

and a child of God, to be a new creature in Christ Jesus (h), to perfect holiness in the fear of God (i), to strive to enter in at the strait gate (k), and to adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things (l), as the Virgin Mary or any of the Apostles were ; nor can you, without renouncing both Reason and Religion, indulge yourself in any practice that appears to you totally inconsistent with the piety of any other Christian whatever, and at the same time fancy that you are abstaining from all appearance of evil, and are of the number of those, whose spirit and soul and body shall be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ (m).

But

(h) 2 Cor. v. 17.

(i) 2 Cor. vii. 1.

(k) Mat. vii. 13.

(l) Tit. ii. 10.

(m) 1 Thess. v. 22, 23.

80 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

But methinks you are by this time ready to cry out, ‘ Why, if this be the case, we must e’en seclude ourselves from all society, bid adieu to chearfulness and relaxations, shut ourselves up in convents, and so become churlish melancholy mopes, and die of the vapours.’

But no, entertain not a thought so derogatory from the honour of Christ and his gospel: for Christianity does at once tend to promote chearfulness and to improve society; and the blessed author of it, so far from countenancing a monkish seclusion from our fellow-creatures, is represented as going about doing good
that

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 81

(n), that we who bear his name should so walk even as he walked (o); and St. Paul commends his beloved Timothy, for having made a good profession before many witnesses (p): now whether they who attend BALLS, PLAYS, &c. are thereby going about doing good, or making a good profession before many witnesses, I apprehend needs no long time to determine; but permit me to say, that those persons are utter strangers to true religion, who look upon it as a melancholy service, as prejudicial to true politeness, or destructive of any social duty whatever. Certain it is, that every real Christian must be serious and thoughtful, must

(n) Acts x. 38.

(o) 1 John ii. 6.

(p) 1 Tim. vi. 12.

82 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

must often seek retirement, and be frequent in prayer, self-examination, and all the exercises of godliness: but then he will not look upon the time that is thus spent as tedious, but as by far the most happy hours of his life. And the reason why so few find any real happiness in religion is, because they have only just enough to deceive themselves, and to make it a burden to them; whereas would they cordially, and without reserve, give up their hearts to God, they would then experience that peace which passeth all understanding (q), and soon be convinced that the pleasures of the world are as empty and delusive, as those which we

(q) Phil. iv. 7.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 83

we derive from God are true and substantial.

If such a thing as perfect felicity be attainable in this world, must it not consist in having all those passions and tempers allayed, which are not only hurtful to our own peace, but to the good of society? in having our natures raised to the highest degree of perfection they are capable of in our present embodied state; in the enjoyment of sweet communion with God, as our reconciled friend and father? in the sense of our adoption as heirs with Christ (r)? and in the anticipation of those pleasures which are at God's right hand (s), and of which the true

(r) Rom. viii. 17.

(s) Psalm xvi. 12.

84 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

true believer is to be made partaker through all the boundless ages of eternity? And are these things likely to promote melancholy! Is this a state so much to be dreaded!

If indeed by society be meant those companies wherein God is forgotten, or what is worse, wherein he is dishonoured; I readily grant that no Christian will voluntarily mix himself with such, except it be with that noblest of all views, a desire of benefiting their souls, and spreading a favour of religious knowledge amongst them. Again, if by relaxations be meant BALLS, PLAYS, and other diversions of the like nature, it is certain that with whatever eagerness these may be pursued by such as are strangers to more

more exalted joys, yet they are as much incapable of satisfying one who has received the grace of God in truth (t), as a philosopher is incapable of being pleased with the toys and rattles of a baby. Nay more, so far would these things be from affording matter of amusement to an humble follower of the crucified Jesus, that it would be inflicting a severe punishment upon him, and must needs strike a damp into his affectionate heart, to oblige him to be present at them; and that with much more reason than it would affect him to see a condemned criminal, instead of bestowing a thought upon his wretched state, or accepting the pardon

H

that

(t) Col. i. 6.

that was freely offered him, spend the whole night in rattling his fetters for his own and the diversion of his fellow-prisoners, not knowing but the next morning he might be dragged to the place of execution.

I leave the discerning reader to make what application of this he thinks proper, and proceed to the fourth Section, concluding the present with the words of that great genius, and divine poet, Doctor Young.

‘ We need not buy our ruin with ‘ our crime,
 ‘ And give Eternity to murder
 ‘ Time.’

SECT.

S E C T I O N I V.

C Hristianity consists not in any form of duties, but in a temper and spirit of growing conformity to Jesus Christ. It is, as our Lord himself assures us, the kingdom of God within us (u), even that Kingdom which is righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost (w). It is no external, pompous thing. It cometh not by observation, or, as the greek word signifies, with outward shew, but it is an inward change wrought in the soul by the Spirit of God, a change whereby we who are by nature chil- dren

H 2

(u) Luke xvii. 20, 21. (w) Rom. xiv. 17.

88 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

dren of wrath (x) do become the children of grace, and are made partakers of the divine nature (y). A change whereby we become one with Christ, and Christ with us, whereby Christ doth dwell in us, and we in him, according to the prayer which he himself offered up to the Father for all that should believe in his name, with that faith which is the gift and operation of God (z). It is such an union with Christ our head, as there is between a vine and the branches (a); between the husband and wife (b); between food and the eater (); between a building*

(x) Eph. ii. 3.

(y) 2 Pet. i. 4. Church Catechism.

(z) John xvii. 21—23. Col. ii. 12.

(a) John xv. 4, 5. (b) Eph. v. 23, &c.

(*) John vi. 51—53, &c.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 89

ing and every stone of that building (c); between a body and every member of that body (d). In short, it consists in having Christ formed in us, and living in us (e): or, as the same Apostle expresses it in another place, it is Christ in us the hope of glory (f).

This great change is further represented to us in Scripture under the strong images of a new creation (g), of a dead man being raised to life (h), of a man being awakened out of a deep sleep (i). It is also set forth under the figure of being

H 3 brought

(e) Eph. ii. 19—22. 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5.

(d) Eph. iv. 16. v. 30. (e) Gal. iv. 19. ii. 20.

(f) Col. i. 27.

(g) 2 Cor. v. 17.

Gal. vi. 15.

(h) Eph. ii. 1. 1 Pet.

iv. 6.

(i) Eph. v. 14.

90 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

brought out of darkness into a marvellous light (k); and being translated into that spiritual kingdom which Christ erects in the hearts of all his people, to make them meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light (l). It is such a change, that from being aliens and enemies, we become real heirs and friends (m). It is a crucifixion of that corrupt nature which we have from Adam, called in Scripture the old man (n), and a putting on a new nature, which we derive from Christ the second Adam, called in contradistinction, the new man (o), whereby

(k) 1 Pet. ii. 9.

(l) Col. i. 12, 13.

(m) Eph. ii. 12, 13. Col. i. 21. Rom. v. 10.—viii. 17.

(n) Rom. vi. 6. Gal.

ii. 20.—v. 24.—vi. 14.

(o) Eph. iv. 22, 24.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 91

whereby those holy dispositions and tempers which we lost by the fall are in great measure restored, and the soul is renewed after the image of him that created him (p.) Old things are past away, behold! all things are become new (q).

And now the man thus created anew and begotten again to a lively hope (r), is looked upon as dead, and risen again in another sense. As before he was alive to the world, and dead to the things of God, so now he is dead to the world, and alive to the things of God; conformed to Christ in the likeness of his death, by a death unto sin; and in the

(p) Col. iii. 10.

(q) 2 Cor. v. 17.

(r) 1 Pet. i. 3.

92 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

the likeness of his resurrection, by rising again unto righteousness (s).

Although these expressions are all extracted from the word of God, and stand unadulterated by any comment of man's devising, yet they are by some impiously treated as enthusiastical fancies and chimeras; and by others as relating only to the conversion of such as lived in pagan times; as if faith were nothing more than a speculative assent to the external evidence of the Gospel, and as if the same divine power were not necessary to open the naturally dark understanding of one as of another, whether he happen to be born in a Christian

(s) Rom. vi. 5. Col. ii. 12. iii. 1, 3.

Christian country or not : for as a truly pious author * observes, ‘ Outward discoveries of truth, till inwardly received, can no more profit, than the sun in the firmament can give sight to the blind ; but when that same God who commanded the natural light to shine out of darkness, shineth in our hearts, to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ (t), then in his light we truly see light, and the two witnesses agree together, as face answereth to face in a glass.’ However, it is a melancholy truth that these things are very little understood or

* The Rev. Mr. Hartley, Rector of Winwick in Northamptonshire.

(t) 2 Cor. iv. 6.

94 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

or attended to ; and hence it is that there is so terrible a decay of inward vital religion, and that piety is measured by shew and profession : hence it is that thousands run into the strangest absurdities, and by a mixture of holy duties, and a round of vain amusements, compose a motley character ; which, whilst by its decency it gains the esteem of the world, and supports the pride of formality, is utterly destitute of every internal principle of the divine life. A little development may perhaps place this character in a more striking light. I will suppose you, what you suppose yourself, a very good sort of body : As such, you make it a constant practice to go to the Sacrament, yet you continue to allow yourself in what the world calls calls its Diversions, BALLS, ASSEMBLIES, &c. Should I ask you, how you can think these things consistent, you would tell me, that if the one is necessary, the other is innocent. But pray how comes it to pass, if you think it thus innocent, that you choose, among the other parts of the preparation for the Sacrament, to abstain that week from BALLS and places of entertainment? Is there not a consciousness in your heart, that there is a manifest inconsistency, for the same person, within a few days distance, to lead up a dance, and kneel at the Lord's Table; to sparkle to-night amidst the train of pleasure, and follow with the greatest delight the sound of a fiddle, and to-morrow to fall prostrate before a cru-

96 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

a crucified Saviour, pouring forth tears, whilst you look on him whom you have pierced, and mourn (u)? Now, absurd as this is, it is the practice of many who would pass for devout. Indeed, according to the present system of lukewarmness, when to go to the Lord's Supper three times a year is by the most judged piety sufficient, and to attend a monthly Communion is godliness above the the common level, this may do well enough, and the self-denial is not great. For supposing a weekly BALL, at the worst they would only twelve times in the year be absent from it. But now suppose these absenters from BALLS the Communion-week, had lived nearer (u) Zech. xii. 10.

nearer the primitive times, when they not only on the first day of the week assembled for breaking of bread, and for prayer, but from house to house (w), through the week, remembered their Lord's death, till he come; they must either have entirely given up their BALL, or been utterly excluded from the communion of the faithful.

To enter a Ball-room on the Friday of the Passion-week, the day of the crucifixion of the Lord of life and glory, would certainly be reckoned profane by those who have the lowest notions of the Christian Religion: it would indicate an uncommon insensibility to

I

that

(w) Acts ii. 46.

98 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

that astonishing Sacrifice, and great carelessness about the effects of it. But is it not the Christian's duty to remember this, and to live under the influence, and in the view of that awful transaction, every day of his life, as much as on Good-Friday? I believe the Scripture will not give you the least reason to suppose, that what would be profane then, would not at any other season be unbecoming the soul, who is always enjoined to be looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of the Lord (x), and remembers him at his table for this very purpose, that he may continually have his loins girt, and his light burning; and he himself be
as

(x) 2 Pet. iii. 12.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 99

as one that waiteth for the bridegroom, when he will return to the marriage (y).

Can it be doubted, whether or no, what is acknowledged to indispose our hearts for waiting upon God, and unfits us for the duties of love which we owe to each other, ought to be avoided by those who are commanded to be ready for every good word and work (z)? I have spoken before of the indisposition for prayer which such amusements occasion; I would add a word more with regard to another social duty. Should you receive a message from any near friend or relation, whilst you were in the middle

I 2

(y) Luke xii. 35, 36.

(z) Tit. iii. 1.

middle of a Dance, that such friend or relation was very ill, and desired once more to receive the pledges of a Saviour's love, before he went to drink of the fruit of the vine where he should drink it new with Christ in the kingdom of his father (a); that as you were near and dear to him, your company would be desirable, that he might here take as it were a solemn farewell of you, till you should meet again; I suppose you would not think yourself in a proper state to be a meet partaker of this holy Ordinance, after having been talking for hours together of nothing but vanity; as, 'How prodigiously warm it is; how well or ill such a Lady

(a) Mat. xxvi. 29.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 101

‘ a Lady looks ; what a shocking
‘ figure such a one is ; what a ‘ charming silk she has on, and how ‘ genteely her head is dressed ; how ‘ many couples there are ; how many ‘ pretty Dances have been called,
‘ how Miss such an one and her ‘ partner flirted it away together,
‘ and much more of the like con‘ versation to the use of edifying :’

Consider seriously whether after such a scene you would not have cause to fear, that were you called to receive the communion of the body and blood of Christ, you should eat and drink unworthily, and consequently eat and drink damnation to yourself (b) ; and that therefore you must refuse the last kind office to your

I 3

(b) 1 Cor. xi. 29.

your dying friend ; and if so, you may easily discover, that whatever in your conduct occasions this, is as utterly inconsistent with true charity, and love of your brother, as it is contrary to the duty and love you owe to Christ and God.

You will say, perhaps, there is a time for all things ; (though in the use you make of these words you horridly pervert their meaning *). Yet, I would ask, in answer,

* Solomon, who had perhaps drank deeper draughts of worldly pleasure than any person either before or since his time, after declaring that all earthly things are empty and delusive, proceeds to shew that notwithstanding this, the generality of people are wholly taken up in the pursuit of them ; and yet there

swer, whether there is a time to sin, and whether a Christian can ever innocently allow himself in any practice whereby the temper
of

there are some who would so grossly misinterpret the words of this great Penitent, as to make him countenance those very things which he affirms to be only vanity and vexation of spirit.

I the rather mention this, because I once heard of a young Lady, who, upon reading those words, Eccles. iii. 4. a time to dance, took it into her head that Solomon was an advocate for Balls; whereas, if she would have given herself the trouble of examining the context, she would have found that this wise Prince, so far from speaking as she would have him, is reckoning up the cares and follies which, some at one time, some at another, wholly engross the attention of the multitude, to the utter neglect of their immortal Souls; amongst the chief of which follies he counts that of dancing.

of his heart is so far discomposed, as to unfit him for a communion of Saints, and fellowship with the Father and the Son? And whether, if death should seize him in this state, he must not necessarily be excluded from both for ever? A thought that deserves the most awakened attention!

Having shewn in how great a degree the diversion of BALLS indisposes us for the duties we owe both to God and our neighbour, as well as its utter inconsistency with that humility, meekness and poverty of spirit which the Gospel indispensibly requires; I shall conclude this Section with observing, that some, who are mighty advocates for BALLS, would nevertheless loudly exclaim

exclaim against those familiarities which are always practised at them, as palpable violations of the laws of modesty, were they to see them put in execution by a company of young people of different sexes where the sound of a fiddle was wanting to drown reflection: and that many Ladies, who without hesitation suffer these liberties to be taken with them in a public assembly-room, would highly resent them, if they were not authorized under the polished name of DANCING.

SECT.

S E C T I O N V.

WHAT need is there of any more arguments against the diversion of modern BALLS? I trust that what I have said already is sufficient to convince every reasonable person that they are a scandal to a Christian country. I proceed therefore to examine how it comes to pass, that the wickedness of BALLS is so little perceived, that many inconsiderate, well-meaning persons, continue to go to them without ever being sensible how great a sin they commit in so doing: I say how great a sin they commit, because, though they may not be conscious of any sin at all, yet wilful ignorance is no plea for innocence: Else the Jews had been guilty of no crime in crucifying the Lord of life, nor St. Paul in persecuting Christ and his Church; who nevertheless styles himself the chief of sinners (c); alluding, as he himself assures us, to those very sins he committed ignorantly.
of

The principal cause why the wickedness of BALLS is so little attended to, is their having been so long established, and frequented by so many people who make an outward shew of Religion; which inclines persons to think that a custom set up as it were by law, in a nation

(c) 1 Tim. i. 15.

nation professing faith in the name of Jesus, and countenanced even by such as are esteemed pious Christians, can neither be sinful in itself, nor attended with any pernicious consequences: But a little consideration will convince us of the fallacy of such reasoning; for it must be allowed, that no custom in itself sinful, (as I have fully proved that of BALLS to be) can alter its nature, either by being long established, by being set up in a Christian country, or because it is conformed to by such as are called good Christians; but on the contrary, the guilt of every sin whatever is aggravated in proportion to the time we have for reflection, and the light afforded us for avoiding it; and there is no reason to doubt
but

but the enemy of souls takes a far greater satisfaction in seeing people fall into his snares in a land where Christianity is the established Religion, than in a nation of Pagans or Mahometans.

Further, would we seriously consider how strangely custom metamorphoses the nature of things in the minds of weak people, and what extravagancies all its votaries must inevitably fall into; would we consider this, I am persuaded we should not suffer ourselves to be hurried away by a blind conformity to its laws, without weighing the fatal consequences; which is the case with such multitudes, who are contented to do wrong, merely because others have done so before

K them;

110 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

them ; and because they never suspect that so many people who are looked upon as good Christians, are all the while leading them to perdition.

For instance, Sunday in Popish countries is the chief day for Horse-races, Plays, Balls, Cards, &c. and there are few Papists who think there is any more harm in going to these diversions on a Sunday, than on any other day, because custom makes no difference between them ; whereas, in England, many who make no scruple of being present at these entertainments on a week-day, would yet look upon any body as monstrously wicked, that should endeavour to persuade them to go to an Horse-race, a Play,

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 111

Play, a Ball, or a Card-table, on a Sunday.

In like manner, some centuries ago, had one Christian proposed to another to take him to caper all night at a BALL, he would either have thought him mad, or, that instead of renouncing all the pomps and vanities of this wicked world (d), he intended to renounce his Christianity.

Thus we see that custom is well called a second nature. Custom has the mighty power of confounding right and wrong, and in the eyes of a deluded world can turn virtues into vices, and vices into virtues.

K 2

Custom

(d) Baptismal Vow.

112 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

Custom has transformed that heavenly virtue of humility, which the Son of God was practising all the while he was on earth, into mean-ness of spirit, and has constituted him alone a man of honour, who pays his gaming-debts, and scorns to forgive an injury. Custom esteems unchastity to be little or no fault in a man, yet custom esteems it so heinously criminal in a woman, that none of her own sex (except such as stand in the same predicament) will ever associate with her ; no, not even though she give the most evident proofs of a sincere repentance. Whereas if she was as full of pride, envy, ill-humour and censoriousness as she could hold, and had every other diabolical temper concentrated in her, yet if

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 113

if she was free from the sin of incontinence, custom would nevertheless suffer her to pass for a woman of strict virtue.

These are a few instances of the power of custom in our Christian land. And yet how few do we find, who do not willingly bow down to this bewitching idol? Alas! few indeed. Shall we then tamely follow every blind guide that assumes the name of a Christian? Or, shall we not rather make the unerring word of God our rule of life? Surely we cannot hesitate in the choice.

Indeed I think it may with great truth be affirmed, that the formal nominal Christian is an adversary we have more need to guard against, than either the professed Atheist, or the most abandoned Profligate; because we suspect no harm from the former, but are ready to fly from the latter as from a toad or a serpent. It is not an open enemy, saith the Psalmist, that hath done me this dishonour, for then I could have borne it; neither was it mine adversary, for then, peradventure, I would have hid myself from him; but it was thou, my companion, my guide, and my own familiar friend (e). Satan is never so likely to succeed with those whom he cannot prevail upon to run into any gross sins, as when he transforms himself into an angel of light (f); under which mask he

114 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

(e) Psalm lv. 12. (f) 2 Cor. xi. 14.

he has always many useful agents in the world, by following whose examples there is too much reason to fear, that numbers of souls have been ruined to all eternity, who never so much as suspected their danger, till it was too late to retrieve their fatal error.

But how should it be otherwise, whilst in the depraved age we live, multitudes are looked upon as good Christians, whom our holy ancestors would not have admitted to their communion? Yet these modern saints give into the follies and vanities of the world without the least hesitation; and thereby become stumbling-blocks to many inexperienced souls, who, seeing such people idolized for their Religion, think

116 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

think they may be very safe under the sanction of such approved examples; but surely little need be said to demonstrate the absurdity of such a conclusion; since, as I observed before, there can be no other rule of practice but the infallible word of God; therefore, if we see any person chime in with such customs as are totally opposite to the Divine precepts therein contained, whatever that person may be in the opinion of the world, and of his own deceitful heart, he is by no means a proper model for a Christian to copy after, who is called upon by all his hopes of Heaven to walk in the paths of that Saviour, who left us an example that we should follow his steps (g): so
that

(g) 1 Pet. ii. 21.

that the great pattern proposed to our imitation, is that of Christ himself; and it is our constant and undoubted duty to imitate him to the very utmost of the abilities which God gives us, and in the same degree that the primitive Christians did; for the same JESUS died for us, that died for them, and if we expect the same reward, he expects the same obedience; yet so different are the lives of the generality of Christians now, from what they were in the first ages of the Church, that the spirit of the Gospel is nearly extinct in most of its professors, who seem to look upon the imitation of Christ as a chimerical thing, and to suppose that the holiness of the first Christians tians is rather to be admired than attained by us.

Were St. Ignatius, St. Polycarp, St. Cyprian, or any other of those pious Fathers to rise from the dead, and take a view of our metropolis, and after having spent some time in it, to hear (by chance) that it was a Christian city, that the inhabitants of it were ingrafted into the Church by Baptism, and professed themselves to be disciples of the blessed Jesus; judge, if you can, how great would be the surprise of any of these holy men at such an account. I am apt to think they would with great difficulty be made to credit it; a plain proof how far the power of custom and example may be prevalent to cast a blindness

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 119

ness over such as profess and call themselves Christians; a blindness ten thousand times more dreadful than Egyptian darkness, inasmuch as it is more deplorable to have a veil drawn over the eyes of our souls than over the eyes of our bodies.

But you object, that ‘ all this ‘ strictness and continual holy walk‘ ing with God, may be the means ‘ of prejudicing others against re‘ ligion, by making them look up-
‘ on it as an irksome employment,
‘ and inclining them to think that ‘ there is no such thing as living
‘ according to what is here laid ‘ down; whereas, by now and then ‘ conforming a little to the world,
‘ we make Christianity appear ami‘ able in the eyes of others, and ‘ thereby

‘ thereby take the best method of ‘ recommending it to those about ‘ us.’

I hope I have already said sufficient, in the third Section, to shew the unreasonableness of that objection, so often brought against true religion by those, who, resting in externals, are ignorant of it's life, power and comfort, (viz.) that it is a melancholy or irksome service; and that I have fully proved it to be (what our Church affirms) perfect freedom (b), and the only source of that holy, spiritual, solid joy, with which a stranger intermeddleth not (i), and which the world

(b) Second Collect for Morning Prayer.

(i) Prov. xiv. 10.

world can neither give nor take away. I proceed now to that formidable argument in favour of dissipation, ‘that by too much strictness we cast a prejudice upon religion, whereas by now and then conforming a little to the world, we make it appear amiable in the eyes of others, and take the best method of recommending it to those about us.’

I would charitably hope, that they who make this objection, really make it through ignorance, and that they believe they have the word of God on their side; for if it be contrary to this, it must be allowed invalid. — Now, do you find any such texts as these throughout the whole Bible: ‘Be

L

‘A LITTLE

122 Addresses relating to BALLS, &c.

'A LITTLE conformed to this world.'
'Take heed that you be not TOO
'LIKE your Father which is in 'Heaven.' — Shocked as you would be even at the supposition of this being the advice of Christ and his Apostles, yet it is the very language of those who stand up for a moderate share of worldliness, lest a continual spiritual walk, and too great a conformity to the image of Christ, should raise a prejudice against religion in the minds of others.

But let us illustrate this by a familiar instance or two, in order to put the case in a true and clear light.

Suppose

Suppose you were willing to dissuade a person from the sins of lying or swearing, how would you go about it? Would you think it necessary to lie and swear now and then A LITTLE yourself, for fear your total abstinence from these sins, and your hearty protestation against them should prejudice the person against that holiness which the Gospel absolutely requires, and without which no man shall see the Lord? Again: by way of destroying in others those hateful tempers of the fallen nature, anger, revenge, envy, malice, and pride, would you assert that it was advisable for you to be a little angry, a little revengeful, a little envious, a little malicious, and to shew what the world calls a decent pride? Now, if you think this a very strange way of curing these sins in others, you plainly see the force of your own argument for an occasional compliance with and conformity to the ways of the world, in order to make others heavenly minded, and for fear of prejudicing them against religion, by what you call an over-strictness; and be assured, that whatever Converts you make to such a religion as this, and however they may approve of your divided walk between God and Mammon, they are not Converts to the vital power of evangelical holiness, and approve not of your life and conversation, for what they see in you conformable to the Gospel of Christ, but for what they see see in you agreeable to the tempers and dispositions of their own hearts. — But, as that religion which pleases the world, will never please God; consequently, that religion which pleases God, will never please the world (k).

True it is, that all unnecessary singularity should be avoided; (for the Christian's is a rational, as well as an holy character) and every appearance of enthusiasm or superstition, should be watchfully guarded against; but then, do not let us call things by wrong names, but let us remember that there is a necessary, as well as an unnecessary singularity; for if, of the many that

L 3

are

126 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

are called, there are but few chosen, it is as certain that these few, who are emphatically stiled the light of the world (l), must be distinguished from the many, as that light itself is distinguishable from darkness. A city that is set on an hill (saith our Saviour) cannot be hid, neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven (m).

Let me then conclude this Section, with an address to the reader, from the ingenious and pious Mr.

Moses

(l) Mat. v. 14. (m) Mat. v. 14—16.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 127

Moses Browne's Essay on the Universe.

‘ O tear the films from thy dis‘ temper’d eyes,
‘ Dare to be manly, virtuous,
‘ good and wise.
‘ Distrust the joys in vain allure‘ ments plac’d,
‘ False is the relish of the fev’rish
‘ taste.

‘ Some to their idol gold an ho‘ mage pay,
‘ Some dream their soft luxurious ‘ hours away ;
‘ Th’ adjusted dress, the compli‘ ment, the ball,
‘ The play, the trifling visit wastes
‘ them all.’

SECT.

S E C T I O N VI.

HAVING shewn that the reason why many people are apt to fancy they can go to BALLS without committing any sin, is entirely owing to the force of custom and example; I would now beg leave to offer a serious admonition to all such as have hitherto been frequenters of them, and are any ways concerned about their everlasting welfare.

Now, since the power of custom and example is so great, and so much depends upon our conforming or not conforming to it; let me intreat

intreat you, in the words of the beloved disciple, not to believe every spirit, but to try the spirits whether they are of God (n), before you suffer yourself to be led by them : Remember that Christ himself hath told us, that not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of his Father which is in heaven (o) ; and whatever a sleepy conscience may persuade any man to think of himself, because he sees many in his own opinion worse, yet St. Paul tells us, not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth (p) ; and our Saviour says in another place

(n) 1 John iv. 1.

(o) Mat. vii. 21.

(p) 2 Cor. x. 18.

130 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

place, that which is highly esteemed amongst men, is abomination in the sight of God (q).

Now, the word of truth assures us, that to be carnally minded is death (r), that the friendship of the world is enmity with God (s), that we must neither love the world, nor the things that are in the world; and that if any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him (t): that the end of those who mind earthly things is destruction (u): that if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his (w): that as many as are led by the Spirit of God,

(q) Luke xvi. 15.

(s) James iv. 4.

(u) Philip. iii. 19.

(r) Rom. viii. 6.

(t) 1 John ii. 15.

(w) Rom. vii. 9.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 131

*God, they are the Sons of God (x): that the fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, (y): that unless Christ be in us, we are reprobates (z): that whatsoever we do in word or in deed, we must do all in the name of the Lord JESUS, giving thanks to God and the Father by him (a): that we must be holy in all manner of conversation (b): and shall be called upon to give an account of every idle word at the day of judgment (c): that we must in any wise rebuke our neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him (d): that our speech must be always with grace (e),
and*

(x) Rom. viii. 14.

(z) 2 Cor. xiii. 5.

(b) 1 Pet. i. 15.

(d) Lev. xix. 17.

(y) Gal. v. 22.

(a) Coloss. iii. 17.

(c) Mat. xii. 36.

(e) Coloss. iv. 6.

132 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

and our communication to the use of edifying, fit to minister grace unto the bearers (f): that our conversation must be in heaven (g), and such as becometh the Gospel of Christ (h).

As these passages are only a small specimen of the constant language of our Saviour and his Apostles, what pretensions can they have to the name of Christians, in whom scarcely any of the before-mentioned marks are to be found; insomuch that they are as totally ignorant of the life and power of Religion, as a blind man is of colours; and know no more of a change of heart, than they do of
the

(f) Ephes. iv. 29.

(g) Philip. iii. 20.

(h) Philip. i. 27.

the change of earth for heaven, or of their natural for a spiritual body? yet, some-how or other, these unhappy self-deceivers contrive to keep conscience quiet by some formal external duties, and by flattering themselves that as they have never been guilty of any gross, enormous sins, they are as sure of heaven as if they were there already; little thinking how much iniquity lies lurking in their hearts, and that the holy law of God condemns all those who have not secured an interest in the Redeemer, for the least sinful thought or indulgence, as well as for the most notorious acts of wickedness; the word of God being, as saith St. Paul, a discernor of the thoughts and

M

*intent*s

intents of the heart (i), and requiring truth in the inward parts (k). But though the Apostle tells them so plainly that to be carnally-minded is death (l); that the friendship of the world is enmity with God (m); and that if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him (n); yet they read these alarming texts with as much unconcern as if they had nothing to do with them; whilst the same love of this world, the same attachment to its customs, follies, and vanities, influence them as much (if not more) than they influence a Jew or an Heathen. How wide then are these dispositions

(i) Heb. iv. 12.

(k) Psalm li. 6.

(l) Rom. viii. 6.

(m) James iv. 4.

(n) 1 John ii. 15.

136 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

them as enthusiasts, fools, and madmen: hereby plainly proving themselves to be none of Christ's, but to be of those natural men, who, as St. Paul declares, cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God, because they are foolishness unto them (r); and therefore (as the author of the book of Wisdom tells us) account the life of the truly religious man to be madness (s).

Moreover, when we are so strictly enjoined to exhort one another daily (t); to be holy in all manner of conversation (u); and to let our communication be to the use of edifying, fit to minister grace unto the bearers

(r) 1 Cor. ii. 14.

(t) Heb. iii. 13.

(s) Wisd. v. 4.

(u) 1 Pet. i. 15.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 137

bearers (w); is it not amazing that multitudes of souls should be so infatuated as to fancy themselves to be in a safe state, whilst they live in a total neglect of these express commands, and can sit and rack their inventions to rake up all the nonsensical chat of the town, and had rather talk for hours together upon the most trifling subjects, than for a moment upon the one thing needful (x); insomuch that religious conversation, which is so essential a part of our duty, and the delight of every true believer, is almost the only kind of discourse that is excluded, not only in public companies, but even amongst intimate friends in their more retired hours.

M 3

It

(w) Eph. iv. 29.

(x) Luke x. 42.

It is true, we are commanded to be wise as serpents as well as barmless as doves (y); and we are cautioned not to cast our pearls before swine, nor to give that which is holy to dogs (z); but then is it not very uncharitable to rank any amongst dogs and swine, before we can tell whether they will hearken to us or not? I am not for stunning people with religious discourse, where we perceive an utter aversion to it; neither am I for cruelly neglecting the opportunities of being useful to their immortal souls, when such opportunities offer; especially as there are not very many companies into which a Christian can enter,

(y) Mat. x. 16.

(z) Mat. vii. 6.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 139

enter, where, if they are not benefited by his conversation, he has not cause to fear being hurt by theirs. I know there are some who will never open their lips about Religion in their conversation with others, because truly they are afraid of disgusting them, and think that if they set a good example, that is sufficient; but, though I allow that example in general goes farther than precept, yet both being equally commanded in the word of God, the observance of the one will be no plea for the omission of the other; and indeed, that man can hardly be said to practice the duties of Christianity himself, who lives in the neglect of so material a branch of it as that of brotherly admonition must be allowed to be, as well for private vate Christians, as Ministers. — It would be a very uncommon way of teaching musick, was a master of that science only to play himself, without giving any instructions to his scholars.

Was the whole of what passes at most of our modern visits to be taken down in writing, and afterwards sent to the press, under the title of ‘ An Evening’s Conversation amongst a company of professed Christians, who are called upon to let their communication be to the use of edifying, fit to minister grace unto the bearers:’ I leave you to judge what kind of a mixture it would be. Yet it is entirely for want of the excellency of the knowledge of Christ
Jesus

Jesus our Lord (a), and of that inexhaustible fund for conversation with which his dying love furnishes every real Christian, that (when the kind Card-Table no longer affords relief) so many are taken up in hearing and relating the follies and miseries of every neighbouring family, and the dull tiresome account of every trifling occurrence since they met last; whilst all the glorious truths of Redemption are as much kept out of sight as if they were the lies of mercenary Priests, or the disgrace of human nature*.

Now

(a) Phil. iii. 8.

* See an excellent Discourse by the Rev. Mr. Venn, intituled, The Variance between Real and Nominal Christians considered, and
the

Now can there be a more dismal sign that there is not a spark of Religion in such hearts? For, where the treasure is, there will the heart be also (b); and out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh (c). The Glutton's delight is to talk of eating; the Drunkard's of drinking; the Sportsman's of his horses and dogs; the most agreeable topic to a fine Lady is dress and diversions; and the Christian is never so happy, as when discoursing about the things of God and his soul. This is an infallible touch-the Cause of it explained. Printed for J. Townsend, at the Corner of White-Fryars in Fleet-Street.

(b) Mat. vi. 21.

(c) Mat. xii. 34.

touch-stone whereby we may try ourselves ; therefore, wo unto those whose hearts condemn them in this respect.

Nevertheless, so little true Religion is there amongst many formal Church-going people, that I wish it were an exaggeration to say, that they have not only a perfect loathing to all holy discourse, but would even look with astonishment upon any person, and either think his head turned, or that he was guilty of a breach of polite behaviour, should he dare in their presence to mention the exceeding great love of our Master, and only Saviour Jesus Christ in dying for our sins (d), or even

(d) Communion Service.

144 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

even to introduce his sacred Name, except in witty sayings or profane exclamations.

These are distinguishing marks whereby the nominal professor * may be often discerned; let us now see how these real enemies and utter strangers

* Seest thou one that is wise in his own conceit, saith Solomon? there is more hope of a fool than of him; so of all persons whatever, the moral, self-righteous Pharisees are the most unwilling to receive the Gospel. The foundation of our reconciliation with God must be laid in a deep heart-felt humiliation, arising from a thorough sense of our original and actual guilt: till this be the case, it is impossible we can have any true longings after the blessings of Redemption, for they that are whole, (that is, they who think themselves so) need not a physician, but those that are sick, as our Saviour himself assures us. Mat. ix. 12.

strangers to true Religion are described in Scripture.

Solomon calls them a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet not cleansed from their filthiness (e). The prophet Isaiah, and after him our blessed Saviour, calls them a people that honoureth God with their lips, whilst their heart is far from him (f). Holy David expostulates with them in the following words; What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth; seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee (g)? St. Paul describes them, as

N having

(e) Prov. xxx. 12.

(f) Isa. xxix. 13.

(g) Psalm l. 16, 17.

146 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof (b). It is said of them, Rev. iii. 1. that they have a name to live, and are dead. Lastly, they are thus described, and the following tremendous sentence is pronounced against them by our Lord himself, from the mouth of his holy Angel. Rev. iii. 15, 16, 17. I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot; so then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth: because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked;

(b) 2 Tim. iii. 5.

naked ; therefore anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

When we observe the generality of people who are called Christians, how many more do we see who answer these marks than those before given : A dismal proof that numbers are lost through a false confidence of salvation, and of the truth of our Saviour's prediction concerning these latter days ; that because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold (i).

This prophecy is indeed so exactly fulfilled at present ; that instead of that Religion, whereby we dedicate ourselves, our souls and bo-

N 2

dies

(i) Mat. xxiv. 12.

146 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof (b). It is said of them, Rev. iii. 1. that they have a name to live, and are dead. Lastly, they are thus described, and the following tremendous sentence is pronounced against them by our Lord himself, from the mouth of his holy Angel. Rev. iii. 15, 16, 17. I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot; so then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth: because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked;

(b) 2 Tim. iii. 5.

naked ; therefore anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

When we observe the generality of people who are called Christians, how many more do we see who answer these marks than those before given : A dismal proof that numbers are lost through a false confidence of salvation, and of the truth of our Saviour's prediction concerning these latter days ; that because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold (i).

This prophecy is indeed so exactly fulfilled at present ; that instead of that Religion, whereby we dedicate ourselves, our souls and bodies

N 2

dies

(i) Mat. xxiv. 12.

148 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

dies to be a reasonable, holy, and lively sacrifice unto God (k), the skeleton of it scarcely remains.

I fear we shall find this assertion verified in the following character of Lucinda.

(k) Communion Service.

SECT.

S E C T I O N VII.

LUCINDA is polite, affable, obliging, and universally esteemed by her acquaintance, who look upon her as a woman of extraordinary prudence and piety. She would not for the world omit her Morning and Evening Prayers; she constantly reads the Psalms and Lessons of the day: she is never absent from Church on Sundays, and would oftener be there on weekdays, if she was not prevented by engagements to go with her friends into the city, to see what Mercer

N 3

keeps

150 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

keeps the most fashionable filks * ; or else by business of importance at home ; such as working in her tambour, the reception of some visitors, or necessary discourse with her Milliner ; or perhaps it is the Dancing-master's morning, and she knows her children will not take half the pains they ought in so material a branch of their education, unless she herself is present.

Nobody can be better convinced of the necessity of visiting the sick than Lucinda, who not only administers medicines to the poor, gratis,
but

* This is called by the Ladies, going a shopping, when they generally tumble all the tradesman's goods about, but buy nothing at all.

but is always ready to play a charitable game at Cards, or to read a Comedy to a sick friend who is in danger of being low-spirited.

Lucinda goes every month to the Sacrament, besides the three great Festivals, and hears her children say their Catechism every Sunday evening; she frequently gives sixpence or a shilling to the poor; and never dines till after Evening-service, upon Ask-wednesday, Good-friday, and the thirtieth of January, when she makes a hearty meal upon costly fish and rich sauce *.

Lucinda

* Notwithstanding all Lucinda's duties, I fear it may be affirmed that she never prayed or fasted in all her life, and that she is an utter

Lucinda is a bitter enemy to naughty women, and often tells you how much she is shocked at the indecent language of the common people in the streets ; yet this very same Lucinda as readily pays her money for a place in that choice Synagogue of Satan, called a Play-house (where she enjoys the company of many of the rakes and prostitutes of the town) and is as much delighted to hear and see God dishonoured by the immodest actions, utter stranger to every spark of charity. Whoever will consider the difference there is between praying and saying of prayers, and look at the description given of charity by St. Paul, 1 Cor. xiii. 1—3. and that of fasting, by the prophet Isaiah, Isai. lviii. 3, 4, &c. will probably be of the same opinion.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 153

actions, oaths, and filthy jests of the actors, as any other person in the Theatre. The play being finished, she returns home to supper, talks till bed-time, what a charming fellow FOOTE is, or how gloriously GARRICK shone; says her prayers, and goes to sleep *.

Ranelagh is also a favourite diversion with Lucinda, though she would like it much better, if it were possible to keep out all low company, which she was in hopes would would have been the case when the price for admission was raised to half a crown: But since this has not had the wished-for effect, and Tradesmen's wives will still imitate their betters, and intrude themselves amongst people of fashion, she often comes home just ready to faint, and declares, that though the room was so crowded, she could scarcely stir, yet there was hardly a creature there *.

* To shew Lucinda in what light the primitive Church regarded those who attended the public spectacles; that noted Father, Tertullian, gives an account of a Christian woman, who in his time returned from the Theatre possessed with a Devil; upon which he makes this remark, (viz.) that Satan found her upon his own ground.

A violent Rout is Lucinda's aversion, yet she dearly loves a snug private party

* Though I doubt not but Lucinda has often read St. Paul's Epistle to Titus, yet I beg leave to remind her that one of the distinguishing characters there given of Christian wives, is, that they are KEEPERS AT HOME. Tit. ii. 5.

party of four or five tables; but, notwithstanding she is immensely fond of Quadrille, yet she never touches a Card in the Passion-week, nor the night before the Communion; and does not much choose to play either Wednesdays or Fridays in Lent, when she can avoid it consistently with good manners *.

Lucinda

* What is Lucinda's reason for abstaining from Card-playing at these seasons, but because she is conscious of the strange impropriety of such an employment for those who are called upon to redeem the time because the days are evil? Eph. v. 15. and to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? 2 Pet. iii. 18. Moreover, though she is so warm an advocate for this way of consuming her leisure hours, yet she would dread the thought of being summoned before the judgment seat
of

Lucinda is greatly discomposed at the institution of the female Coterie, and declares, that through this society, the Soho assembly, and the frequency of masquerades, a virtuous woman will in a few years be a perfect phoenix.

But if the wickedness of the age causes Lucinda such deep concern, the present growth of Enthusiasm affords her no less matter of regret; insomuch that often times when she is at Cards, she will hold forth between the Deals, upon the necessity of Christ with a pack of cards in her hands; well knowing that in such circumstances she would have little reason to hope that the Bridegroom had found her watching, with her lamp trimmed, and her oil burning: Mat. xxv.
of

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 157

of keeping a proper medium in Religion ; but, ‘ forsooth, people now a-days, must be either Saints or Devils ; though for her own part she is contented to go on in the good old way, and is not so precise and scrupulous, but that she can serve God, and take her innocent amusements very well.’

Lucinda has now and then some twinges of conscience, but these are generally silenced by calling to mind her duties ; and by reflecting how much more religious she is than any of her acquaintance ; or if this will not do, another chapter in the Bible, and somewhat extraordinary to the first Beggar she meets, presently sets all to rights again.

O

Such

Such is Lucinda, and is she not quite a good creature? Yet if her Religion is to be tried at the bar of God's word, she may with as much justice suppose that she served in quality of a foot-soldier during the last campaign in Germany, or that she fought in a coat of mail against the Saracens in the holy wars, as that she is now clothed with the whole armour of God (l); that her life is a spiritual warfare, and she herself a good soldier of Jesus Christ, who endureth hardness, and is not entangled with the things of this present evil world (m).

She may as well imagine that she is taking a pilgrimage with the Turks

(l) Eph. vi. 11, 12, &c. (m) 2 Tim. ii. 3, 4.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 159

Turks to Mahomet's tomb at Medina, or with the Papists to the Virgin Mary's house at Loretto, as that she is now living like a stranger and pilgrim upon earth, looking for a city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God (n).

She may with equal propriety believe that she has been all her life long laid in a coffin, or wrapt up in a winding-sheet; as that she is now dead to the world, and her life hid with Christ in God (o).

In short, she has just as much reason to fancy herself already a glorified Saint in heaven, as that there is any possibility of her arriving
O 2 there

(n) Heb. xi. 13, 14. (o) Col. iii. 3.

there in the state she is in at present: Yet how many souls are building their hopes of salvation upon such a religion as Lucinda's? and for no other reason in the world, but because they see others, who are looked upon as excellent Christians, going on in the same way, and in the same wretched delusion with themselves: whereas, if they would candidly search the Scriptures, I question not but they would find themselves condemned in almost every page of the Gospel: For the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh at the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart (p).

Some

(p) 1 Sam. xvi. 7.

Some people will perhaps cry out, Surely this is talking very uncharitably, for at this rate how few will be saved? But they cannot tell what they mean, except they would have us make God a liar; and in order to lull our poor fellow-creatures into the fatal dream of carnal security, cry, peace, peace to their souls, where the Lord himself hath said, there is no peace. That sound pillar of our excellent Church, Bishop Hall, in his Character of a real Christian, has these words; ‘ I would it were uncharitable to say, there are many Professors, few Christians; if words and forms might carry it, Christ would have clients enough.’

Our blessed Saviour assures us, that broad is the way, and wide is the gate, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat; and, that narrow is the way, and strait is the gate, that leadeth to life, and few there be that find it (q): Yet how composedly do many persons repeat these awakening passages, who at the same time are confirming the truth of them; and though, perhaps, they live in no outward enormities, do nevertheless swim with the stream, till they fall into the gulph of endless misery. But if we allow our Saviour to speak truth in these places, we can have no more terrible proof of our being

(q) Mat. vii. 13, 14.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 163

being in the way that leads to destruction, than when we are doing as the generality of the world do; nor can we have any better evidence of our being in the right way, than when we are resolved to act contrary to the torrent of custom, and are regardless of being thought particular; concerning which, Satan's instruments, in order to affright God's children from their obedience, talk so learnedly in their Lectures upon the necessity of a prudent compliance with the world.

Again, when we are told in Scripture, that all who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution (r), that the kingdom of heaven

(r) 2 Tim. iii. 12.

164 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

heaven suffereth violence, and that the violent take it by force (s); that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven (t); that whoever will come after Christ, must deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow him (u); that many are called, but few chosen (w), that the righteous are scarcely saved (x); that through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of heaven (y); and, that many shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able (z): I say, when we read these, and other texts of the like nature, we must needs imagine

(s) Mat. xi. 12.

(t) Mat. xix. 24.

(u) Mat. xvi. 24.

(w) Mat. xx. 16.

(x) 1 Pet. iv. 18.

(y) Acts xiv. 22.

(z) Luke xiii. 24.

gine, that it is not so easy a matter to get to heaven as many people are apt to fancy, who seem to have found out quite a new road thither, very different from that strait, narrow way, to which our Saviour has directed us, and in which whosoever now dares to walk, will be told that he is righteous over much, and solemnly cautioned against the danger of running into extremes, and carrying matters too far: But this is no more than must be expected in an age wherein so many do at once glory in their shame (a), and are ashamed of that in which they ought to glory (b). An age wherein formality supplies the place of vital Christianity, and in which spiritual

(a) Philip. iii. 19. (b) Gal. vi. 14.

ritual Religion and Enthusiasm are so far become synonymous terms; that a person is looked upon as little less than mad as soon as he comes to the right use of his understanding. An age wherein the pure doctrines of Scripture and of the Reformation, are set aside for lifeless morality and dry systems of ethics; and a steady adherence to the truly evangelical tenets of the established Church, is deemed the mark of a weak judgment, and is sufficient to gain a man a name of reproach, and to make him become a by-word among the people (c).

Let us, therefore, as we value our immortal souls, take heed how we

(c) Job. xvii. 6.

we suffer ourselves to be led astray by any wretched pretenders to Christianity, and carefully avoid all those snares that the Devil and his adherents have established in this land, which so justly deserves to be visited by the judgments of a righteous God, for our crying sins and horrible lukewarmness.

Let us reflect what those who have been cut off without having made their peace with God through Christ their Redeemer, and have felt the punishments of the damned ; let us, I say, reflect what they would do, could they begin their lives again, or obtain one such opportunity of repentance, as God of his infinite mercy now vouchsafes to us. Would they waste any of their

their precious time in BALLS, and such like vanities, and dance for hours together upon the frightful precipice of eternity, not knowing but the next moment might hurry them again into those inexpressible torments they once experienced, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched; where there is weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth (d)?

Judge therefore yourselves, Brethren, that ye be not judged of the Lord (e), and take heed, according to the Apostle's advice, that you refuse not him that speaketh from heaven (f); for the God of Truth hath

(d) Mark ix. 44. (e) Communion Service.
(f) Heb. xii. 25.

hath said, that his spirit shall not always strive with man (g) : To-day, therefore, whilst it is called to-day, harden not your hearts ; but calmly and seriously reflect what a fearful thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God (h), whose word is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit (i) ; and who is even a consuming fire (k) ; and able to destroy both body and soul in hell (l).

Consider, I beseech you, consider, that these are not airy phantoms and idle tales, but they are awful

P

(g) Gen. vi. 3.

(h) Heb. x. 31.

(i) Heb. iv. 12.

(k) Heb. xii. 29.

(l) Mat. x. 28.

170 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

awful and interesting truths ; truths that are founded upon the word of God, and such as should make the unrenewed heart of every self-deceiving formalist to tremble ; wherefore, I pray God they may sink deep into your consciences, and excite you to fly to JESUS the Saviour of all that truly turn unto him ; and if you are sensible of your need of a Redeemer, and will come as a lost, undone sinner, not trusting in your own righteousness, but in God's manifold and great mercies (m), there is no doubt but he will wash you clean by his precious all-atoning blood, and clothe you with the robe of his perfect righteousness. Being thus made free from sin, and become

(m) Communion Service.

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 171

become servants to God, be urgent in imploring the continuance of divine grace, to enable you to walk worthy of your vocation, in all holiness and good works. Then shall you find, (but never by the palliating and superficial divinity of too many in our days,) that the ways of Religion are ways of pleasantness, and that all her paths are peace (n).

(n) Prov. iii. 17.

The CONCLUSION.

HAVING answered the arguments commonly brought in vindication of BALLS, and produced several proofs of their evil tendency and actual wickedness: having shewn the reasons why, nevertheless, these diversions have gotten such root, and the sinfulness of them is so little perceived, that many unwary souls go to them without suspecting their danger: having admonished you to beware of a blind conformity to custom, and of the examples of nominal Christians, and given some marks whereby such may generally be dis-

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 173

discerned from those who are Christians altogether: and lastly, having exhorted you to flee from the wrath to come (o); unto Him who is able and willing to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him (p); I cannot yet conclude, without observing that it is indeed a melancholy reflection, that custom should have so far blinded the eyes of many, as to make a demonstration of this kind necessary; but since this is the case, all proper care, I hope, has been taken to set forth these enormities under their true colours, which, I trust, I have now done without the least aggravation; and if it can be proved that I have asserted any thing whatever, that is

(o) Mat. iii. 7.

(p) Heb. vii. 25.

174 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

is not strictly agreeable to holy Scripture and plain Reason, I readily give up the point *.

I am

* Though, I trust, I have advanced nothing against Balls and Plays, but what can be warranted by the best authority; yet I may be perhaps thought rather too severe in having censured THE FLOURISHING TRADE OF CARD-PLAYING: for, since we read in history of a Roman Emperor who spent his time in catching flies, surely we may justly claim the privilege of diverting ourselves a few hours in an evening (especially as it may be done so very consistently with the fashionable ideas of piety) in counting black and red spots, and asking, What's trump, who shuffled, who cut, and who dealt? I forbear mentioning the peevish and avaricious tempers which are too often conspicuous at a Card-table; as well as the *fib*s which are told about what is won or lost.

And

Address relating to BALLS, &c. 175

I am sensible, that if any body in the first ages of the Church had attempted to prove that no Christian could go to BALLS, PLAYS, ROUTS, REVELLINGS, and such like, without disgracing his holy profession; his arguments would have been looked upon to be as unnecessary, as those of a man who, in these days, should write a folio in order to prove that the Sun shines on a bright day; and his labour as needless, as that of one who should go through all the rules
of

And though we should be free from these tempers ourselves (which I believe, however, is very difficult upon such occasions,) yet we certainly ought not to be instrumental in stirring them up in the hearts of others.

176 Address relating to BALLS, &c.

of arithmetic to shew that two and two make four ; but,

Tempora mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis ?

The Church could once her Golden Ages boast ;

But sad experience proves those Ages lost !

T H E E N D.

